REGULATION OF RAILROADS.

FRIDAY MORNING, JAN. 6, 1882.

The inquiry as to the manner in which the railroads should be subjected to governmental regulation involves a multicade of questions touching the economics of preduction, mansportation and exchange. We have herotolore noticed the preliminary report of Mr. Nimmo, chief of the burean of statistics at Washington, on the railroad problem in general. His whole report on the internal commerce of the United States is now at band, making a volume of nearly 500 pages. One of its most interesting features is a history of the legislation of Great Britain upon the subject of railroad regulation. Of course the conditions in a small and densely inhabited country like England are different in many respects from those existing here. Hence British legislation could not be made to apply in detail to our rail roads. Nevertheless Mr. Nimmo's account of it is valuable for the information it contains. The extension of railroads in Great Britain. as in this country, has been marked by periods of competitive warfare, the bankruptcy of many roads, and the consolidation of lines. In that country, co-operation in the conduct of joint traffic has been quite generally practiced. Pooling has also to a considerable extent been resorted to, for the prevention of wars of rates in the conduct of competitive traffic, and has gained judicial recognition. Several parliamentary committees have, in a very thorough manner, taken in hand the whole ruestion as to the relations of the railroads to the public interests. The first of these committees was appointed in the year 1889, and Included in its membership the renowned Sir Robert Peel. in pursuance of the recommendations of this, and of subsequent committees, various expedients have been proposed for the prevention of exorbitant rates and unjust discriminations in rates and fares, and for the maintenance or the conservative element of competition, as a regu-I stive principle in railroad transportation.

The joint select committee of 1872 discarded. as regulative measures, both the principles of ogual mileage rates, and of establishing standrds for the revision of rates and fares, foundsd on cost and profit. They also arrived at the conclusion that competition, as a regulation. Owing to differences in the hours of Nebraska liquor law for Illinois. For fully ten minutes the deerway was blocked up, and during the greater portion of this time half a dozen women lay on the stops under the feet of a frighten d crowd. A few men who had lost their scare wout to work heroically to reacue thom, and succeeded in getting them out after they had been walked over by a large number of men. As fast as taken out the victims were taken to aljoining houses and caret for. It was found that several were seriously and probably fatally hart. Mrs. Spilker, a married woman, aged about 45, received internal injuries and it is supposed will die. Mangie Myer, a young woman, was braised in the face by boot heels, and injured internally. Mary Keyes, Mary Ann Ritter, Alanio Bund's and Miss Dichut, young women, all received sections Injuries and recovery is doubtful. Mrs. Deleman, an old lady, Miss Lohman and Miss Wightian were budly injured. Rev. Haltenbrach, who was caught in the crowd, had a rit, broben. Many who were knocked down and slightly injured were taken home as soon se they escaped and thoir naines were not sacertained.

There was no occasionifer in searce and no cause for a paste. After the excitement, which lasted for half an lour, the funeral ceramonies were resumed. Up to 8-clock this evening the victims were alive, but there is little hope for Mrs. Spilker, Miss Myer and Miss Bhody.

As San Prancisco grow, het lumber dealers reached out for timber sources and so and reached reached. As San Francisco grew, but lumber dealers reached out for timber samese, and an enterprising firm put up a small mill on Puget sound. Other small mills were built, and soon-about 18.0 1.2- half a dozen stabilishments, varying in along cutting capacity from 2500 to 10,000 feet, were in operation. Their product was shipped to ban. Francisco by small as becomes. In these early days timber was the slight article of export, and every other industry on the sound had its origin from the lumber business and bepended upon it. The farmer sold his produce to the loggers, the stock-raiser sold his meat to the mills and his terra to the loggers, the mill commills and his stears to the loggers, the mill con panies imported by their vessels on their retur-tries all the merchandise used in the settlement the product and armics of men were employed. About this time the great timber firms of flan Francinco sent out agents, who searched the whole region over and, in the names of their employers, flied upor every available foot of forest land, for which the merely nominal government rate was paid. A few large firms thus obtained advantages which have subtled them to practically monopoly but to the extent of dictating prices for logs and of driving small competitors from the field.

THE LUMBER BYSINESS

THE LUMBER BUSINESS Is now larger and more prosperous than at any time in the past. A long season of depression and dullness ended two years ago and has been followed by a boom now in its height. There are many small local mills on the sound, and several not so small which supply the home trade. Of these there are two at Seattle which occasionally ships large, and one on the Niequally, a stream which puts top the sound striks southern end near "facuna. There are now seven large export millarithming of full time as follows:

Besides these, there are two mills not in operation one at Port Luglów departy 125,000 per day, and another at Proport or Militon, capacity 40,000 few per day. I am told that the later mill is idle under a subsidy of $260 per month. The former is owned. by the Gamble company. The figures given i table above, are estimates verified by many woon I have interviewed as "about correct."

to furnish information about the business of the mills under their management.
It will be seen by the table that the delly capacity of the mills is 690,000 feet, or about 100,000,000 for the working year. But as mone of them work up to the extreme figure, the actual cut is something less. As no record is kupt of coastwise exports it is not possible to obtain figures of shipments either for this year or the years paxt. Messrs. Rothschild & Co., shipping and commission merclants of Port Townsend, have kept a record of forlegg shipments during the last six months which shows a good foreign export business as follows:
Month. Cargons. Value.

Month. 66, 608, 73 11, 833, 54 Total for six months....52..... $380,688,43 This lumber was shipped to the Sandwich Islands, Merree, Australia, China and the Bouth American is atex and to New Zealand. The trade is growing republy and will seen assume great proportions.

Methods of logging and lumber making on Puget scand are wasteful in the entreme. It is estimated that five million feet of timber is divertoyed for each one million feet of timber is divertoyed for each one million feet of timber is divertoyed for each one million feet of marketable lumber produced. The writer of this, in an article written in September from Coos bay, spoke as follows of the waste of timber, and further observation has only confirmed the views then expressed: "Here, as clarwhere on the northern coast, the facests are being cut down with a basts and waste which regards only the present and with a few years frameform our splendld timber region into a desorate stumpy wilderness. A practical mill miss told not that for overy million feet of marketable lumber shipped from Coos bay—and the figures apply to Pagel bound and the Columber region into a desorate stumpy wilderness. A practical mill miss told not that for overy million feet of timber is destroyed. However, and of those only the lumber of the country is wasted. Loggers take only the function feet of timber is destroyed. However, and of those only the best cuts, burning the butts, limbs and sincil trees as the casiest way of oldering off the ground, large slices of these best cuts are slabbed off and burned. There is no cire to save. It is cheaper to go into the forest primeral slad choose from its best stores than to potter with slabs and odd cads. Each mill man slad legger is making has earn for thine, not regarding the interests of the people who will occupy this land fifty or a hundred years from new. It is a truthless and cruel waste."
